AS OTHER EDITORS SEE IT

Occasionally someone gets into print with a suggestion as to how hurricanes can be controlled.

The favorite is one that urges the use of bombs, exploded at or near the source of hurricanes with the belief that the detonations will speedily break up the threatening storm. The plan has its advocates, but the suggestion has often aroused considerable ribald criticism.

Now from far-off Los Angeles where they believe anything, there comes to the editorial desk a suggestion that, we believe, should take the prize, whether or not it would cure the hurricane evil.

A correspondent, in all good faith, tells of a method adopted by a farmer in a Northwestern state who defended his property from destructive cyclones by the simple expedient of addressing the approaching storm in altern language saying, "Do not touch my house, or my barn, or my stock, or anything that belongs to me."

The correspondent says that the farmer's property was always respected by cyclones, while his neighbors' property was frequently destroyed.

Now the proposition, coming from Los Angeles, is for the people of the East Coast of Florida to assemble at the seashore, when a hurricane warning is given and use the Northwestern farmer's method for defeating cyclones.

The correspondent then asserts that if this method were adopted here and in Cuba, "there is no reason why the annual destruction of life and property could not be prevented."

Probably, we people who live in the regions sometimes visited by hurricanes, will prove rather sceptical of the remedy proposed, for we have learned by years of experience that tropical hurricanes are rather stubborn and have a way of their own.—Miami Herald.

closed but to the sentiment of the people is against gambling. I am not going to do anything. You can't even get a jury to convict gamblers.

That is the case in a nutshell. There is no denying that the sentiment of Dade county is in favor of a liberal attitude toward gambling. It is reflected in the verdict of juries and expressed every time there is an election. Candidates who advocate a closed town are shunned in favor of those who let it be known that they will be lenient with the "good" ones while bearing down on the "bad" ones.

That treatment has been endorsed so often that it amounts to an approved public policy. Moreover, it is a policy for which there is great deal to be said when applied to a resort section such as Dade county. At any rate the evidence is overwhelming that the people want it that way and Governor Cone is dead right when he tells them they will have to show him they want something else before he sticks out his neck in the matter.

To show him is easy enough. All of the communities in the Miami area elect their own municipal officials who can, if they wish, suppress gambling within their jurisdiction. In the county as a whole the people also elect a sheriff, a judge and a county prosecutor who can do everything the governor can do. If a majority of the voters want gambling stamped out it can be done by their own direct actions without calling upon state officials whose responsibility is remote and who, were elected for altogether different duties.

At the outset of his administration Governor Cone announced that he would not remove local officials unless they were convicted by a jury. That is a sound policy which won instant approval all over the state. The proper place to try an official for failure to live up to his oath is in court, not in the political atmosphere of the governor's office, and the place to remove an undesirable official is at the polls, not by some authority which may not represent the views of a majority of the people. In his Miami remarks the governor put all that in very few and very plain words. After due and sufficient advice notice he is simply putting a promise into performance and nobody can complain of that.—Ft. Myers News-Press.

Don't put up with useless PAIN
Get rid of it
When functional pains of menstruation are severe, take CALIBET. If it doesn't benefit you, consult a physician. Don't neglect such pains. They depress the tone of the system, cause sleeplessness, loss of appetite, and cut your resistance.
Get a bottle of Calibet and see whether it will help you, as thousands of women have said it helped them.
Besides easing certain pains, Calibet also facilitates the whole system by helping women to get more strength from the blood.

TOO LATE TO CLASSIFY

By Russell Kay.

COLUMBUS, OHIO. Folks up in this part of the country certainly take their fairs seriously, for in spite of a record-breaking wave, over eighty thousand people turned out for Governor's Day at the Ohio State Fair.

Invited by Secretary of Agriculture Earl Hanford of Ohio to visit the Ohio Fair on my way home, I stopped over for a day.

Earl Brown, George Clement, Jack Monahan and Al Shaffer made up our Florida party and we brought along the "Florida Orange Blossom Quartet" at the special request of Ohio officials who were thrilled by their splendid work at Cleveland and arranged to present these talented students from the Florida Agricultural and Mechanical college as guest entertainers at the Governor's Luncheon on a network broadcast and in front of the grandstand both afternoon and night.

It was a wonderful "break" for Florida and the quartet did themselves proud. In spite of the fact that these lads have been featured in Cleveland for two years and have been on nearly two hundred radio programs, they seem to be more popular than ever and folks never tire of hearing them sing these old familiar spirituals such as "I Got Shoes," "Joshua Fit de Battle of Jericho" and "Swing Low, Sweet Chariot"—or such southern melodies as "Kentucky Babe," "Sho'nin' Bread" and "Way Down Upon the Swannee River."

The Ohio Fair, state maintained, is a splendid exposition but quite different from our Florida shows. Here livestock is the outstanding feature and the show cattle, show horse, show and poultry show are of the first rank. Lacking the varied and colorful displays of tropical fruits, plants and flowers that make Florida fairs so brilliant and impressive, Ohio gives a good account of its agricultural resources with well arranged exhibits of grain, hay and general farming crops and is well supplied with high class commercial displays.

Compared with our own Florida fair, however, in spite of their extensive grounds, larger buildings and generous state appropriations for maintenance and operation, they can't touch us for brilliant, showmanship, variety of exhibits, illumination, decoration and cleanliness. You must really visit some of these other state fairs to appreciate our own.

Were it not for the fact that Secretary Hanford has promised to attend the Florida fair next February, I would hesitate to make the above comparison, considering what a marvelous host he proved himself to be and the kindly expressions of good will and friendship for our state made publicly both here and in Cleveland, by our governor Davey. But I am sure when these estimable gentlemen visit Florida and see the Florida fair for themselves they will realize that my statements are not biased and that I might have said a lot more.

But the Ohio state fair is a splendid show and a credit to the Buckeye State, and the men who conduct it. It isn't their fault that Mother Nature gave Florida so much more to work with!

Ohio's Governor Davey is being considered seriously in this section as a presidential possibility. His masterful handling of the strike situation in Ohio proved him head-and-shoulders over Earle of Pennsylvania or Murphy of Michigan. They both had their chance and muffed it beautifully to kill what democratic chances they might have had for 1940.

Talk of a third term for Roosevelt doesn't strike a popular chord anywhere, as far as I've been able to see. Labor, regardless of his being the greatest friend it ever had, condemns him for not doing more—particularly the CIO element. Industry, on the other hand, charges administration's labor attitude toward sit-down strikes, intimidation and property destruction, with deliberately creating the most serious national problem the nation has faced in years.

Walter Hooker of Belle Glade made a prediction at the weekly meeting of the Pahokee Rotary club last week that furnished food for thought. He had just returned from northern states where he spent a vacation and was making up his attendance at the Pahokee club for he's a good Rotarian.

When called upon by the program chairman to discuss the outlook for a profitable vegetable crop this season Walter, among other things, said that Glades growers should plan for the future, plan diversify—if they expect to prosper here pointed out the result of growing beans year after year—depletion of the soil. He didn't say it in so many words but he left a thought with the boys present that farming in the Glades, as it is done today, must take a great change within the next few years if profitable returns are to be expected on the vast farming investments.

ABOUT PEOPLE

Lou Betzner is probably one of Belle Glade's biggest boosters.

Whether it's on the golf links or in his hardware store in Belle Glade, Lou always has a good word for his home town. Lou has one of the nicest hardware stores that you'll find anywhere in the state. During the past few days he has had some extra space built at the rear of the building. It will be used for storage of the large stock of heavy hardware. The addition is two stories and the upstairs part will be used for the radio department which is under the direction of Howard Baer.

Howard has a flock of all kinds of gadgets to work on radios. All kinds of repairs are carried in stock and when you take your radio there it isn't long until he has it working again.

Friends of Harold Rosenberg will be glad to know that his condition shows just a little improvement during the past few weeks. Harold is the former Canal Point postmaster and is secretary of the Pahoek and Police Lake drainage districts with offices in Canal Point.

While fishing at Jensen several months ago he slipped and injured himself seriously. An operation has been performed but he still remains in a serious condition. His condition has responded slowly to medical treatment.

With the advent of another farming season brokers are returning from northern points. Sam Chastain, Canal Point broker and shipper, has returned home and is getting ready for another season. Sam followed the vegetable deal north this summer and had little time for a vacation. He reports that farming conditions in northern states are in fair shape and that farmers are receiving good returns for their offerings.

He is optimistic over present outlook in the Glade area for a profitable season this time.

Bob Creech was surrounded by a group of Belle Glade farmers Wednesday afternoon in front of a Glade drug store. A newspaper man walked up about the time that Bob was crating about early planting. When asked by this reporter if he had planted any corn this year he emphatically said, "NO." Bob did say, however, that he planned to start either on the fifteenth or twentieth of this month and plant every other day until the fifteenth of March. Maybe it's a good plan not to plant too early because Bob is rather a successful farmer and usually comes out on the profitable end of the deal.

Mr. and Mrs. M. H. Harrison were guests over the week end by their son and daughter-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. O. W. Harrison. They were accompanied home to Arcadia by Miss Elizabeth Smith, who has been visiting Miss Grace McEntiff.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Perkins, Mr. and Mrs. S. G. Burns and Colony Blakey enjoyed a fishing party on the Kissimmee River Monday.

IMPORTANCE OF GRASS CAN'T BE OVER STRESSED

State experiment station workers are now studying and working with grasses in their efforts to be of service to the Florida farmer.

While this work has been going on for a number of years, it is now receiving greater emphasis than ever. It is the opinion of Dr. H. Harold Hume, assistant research director, that the future of the cattle industry in this state lies primarily in the ability of the farmer to produce good grass for his stock.

Grass has come to the front in agriculture. It has come to stay there, for farmers are fast realizing its importance in successful livestock and crop production.
